

CROWN ZELLERBACH has given the city of Camas a sizeable amount of acreage over the years which is still in use today, particularly for the benefit of youth. The Camas mill has donated what is known as Louis Bloch Park (1940), Crown Park (1934), Lackamas Tree Farm Park (1928), the James David Zellerbach school site, pictured above, and--for the nominal fee of $1 per year--the J.D.

Currie Youth Camp property, located on the north shore of Lackamas Lake. The JDZ school was dedicated Nov. 19, 1967. William J. Zellerbach was on hand for the ceremony. Of James David Zellerbach, for whom the school was named, it is said: "He regarded it as an imperative but pleasant duty in the community to set things right--to lift men up--to make life better, more meaningful and beautiful for all."
